MEET SARAH

Sarah is majoring in Anthropology and Art History with a minor in Latin.

Sarah has sung advanced choral repertoire with Oriana Singers in the School of Music for six semesters. She also spent three weeks in Rome after her first year through a faculty-led study tour of Roman history and archaeology and studied abroad in Perugia, Italy, last fall.

“In the Department of Anthropology, I have interacted with people of diverse backgrounds and experiences every day. The things I learned from these people have been more valuable than any information I have read in a book. By knowing how to communicate effectively with colleagues, work well with other people, and network successfully, I was able to find a job easily by relying on human connection and asking for help from the people around me.”
